

GOLF AT THE PALACE

The Playa Grande Golf Course easily being one of the most stunning golf courses in the Dominican Republic and often considered by many as one of the most beautiful golf courses in the entire Caribbean.

Located between Rio San Juan and Cabrera on the pristine northern coast of this Caribbean island paradise, the Playa Grande Golf Course covers an area of over 370 acres. Designed by the Robert Trent Jones, Sr. and opened to the public in 1997. When Mr. Jones visited the property in 1992, he is said to have actually cried when told he'd been chosen to be the architect.

The Playa Grande Golf Course is often dubbed the 'Pebble Beach of the Caribbean', a thought that sounds almost too good to be true, but consider that Pebble has only six holes on the oceanside bluffs (6-7-8-9-10-18), while Playa Grande has 10. One of the World's Greatest? This course has that kind of serious potential. It's set high above the ocean and it plays along 100-foot bluffs and that definitely makes it immediately comparable to Pebble. The fairways are incredibly lush since everything grows so well here, and the course is naturally landscaped with native flowers. Greens are huge, varied in shape and steeply sloped, but with few tricky undulations. Generally, what you see is what you get. The standard, "challenging for the best players, but playable for everybody" actually applies here. This course really has no negatives. It has the spectacular oceanfront setting, it has hills, and it has the widest possible choice of tees, allowing the course to be played from 4,488 yards all the way back to over 7,000 yards.
